  - I want to run the code of my team members to test the code.
    I have reached out to a team member for help because it is not going well to do this on my own.
  - I help the team by taking charge of the meetings to get things done.

  - Too often off-topic (read technical issues) are brought up and discussed during these meetings. These meetings have a very specific purpose. Again I have taken an active role in our meetings to push very hard to complete all steps in the SCRUM process.
  - We are now being much more efficient at applying SCRUM in our workflow. It feels like many team members preemptively take mental notes during sprints in order to better perform our sprint review and to better prepare for next sprint. We are coming closer to applying SCRUM seamlessly to our workflow and that we soon will be more efficient with SCRUM than without it(like finally getting over the hill).

  - It's the same for this week. I have not contributed any code this week. I need to get into the code.
